Ovarian Activity and Reproductive Performance of Dairy Cows Fed Different Amounts of Phosphorus. By Tallam et al., page 3609. Supplementation of phosphorus in diets for dairy cows has been practiced for decades to enhance reproductive performance. Recent studies, however, do not support this practice. The present study showed that feeding phosphorus at or above NRC requirements did not affect postpartum ovarian activity or reproductive performance.